NON-FICTION

1 - The Ideas Around You - Suggestions for capturing and warehousing the world of non-fiction ideas which surround you. You'll learn to delve into your mind's hidden recesses and dredge up material only you can provide, and you'll learn to evaluate ideas and make them saleable. Includes tape: "From Idea to Published Manuscript." $34.

2 - Structuring An Article - Some writers just sit down and write and then cut, rearrange, and paste as best they can, but this method often creates frustration and can leave you with a disjointed, disorganized article. Learn the first five steps of a seven-step process that works. Includes tape: "Writing Manuscripts that Sell and Touch Lives." $34.

3 - Rewrites & Revisions - How much of your first draft can you expect to find in your final manuscript? Some writers claim they revise until they have no more than twenty-five percent left with a full seventy-five percent ending up as refuse! Other writers say they sell their first drafts! Learn how to prepare your articles for submission—first by editing, then by polishing your work. $30.

4 - Devotional/Inspirational Writing - For many writers, the call to write came through a deep longing to share Christ with unbelievers and to share the faith and encouragement of the Lord with those who believe. If this has happened to you, then writing devotions, inspirational articles, or tracts as a means of reaching people for Christ is a ministry opportunity you'll want to pursue. $30.

5 - Personal Experience Stories and Articles - Learn how to pass on to your readers the help and comfort God has given you. We'll explore personal experience stories, self-help articles, testimonies, nostalgia, humor, and personal essays. Includes tape: "Turning Personal Experiences Into Print." $34.

6 - Feature Articles - Mainstream America needs the skills of Christians who gather, sift, and interpret information responsibly and help readers make well-informed, godly choices for their families and themselves. The field is broad and diverse. In this workshop, we'll focus on feature articles that offer a variety of sub-types: exposition, how-to, news, interview, personality, and others. $30.

7 - Columns, Departments, and Editorials - Today's secular media have too few Christian columnists, so non-Christian values and philosophies often permeate our society's moral and ethical standards. However, people everywhere are desperately searching for someone with workable answers to life's complexities and problems. Learn the types of columns, departments, and editorials that are needed and how you can meet that need. $30.

8 - Writing Curriculum - Are you ready to tackle a new challenge—one that disciplines your work habits and enhances your ability to use concise, precise language? One that seasons and deepens your spiritual life as well as your writing career? Then curriculum writing may be for you! Learn the differences between curriculum and other non-fiction writing, the various types of curriculum, special needs and requirements for curriculum writing, how to submit a query, and the unique aspects of assignment writing. $30.

9 - Writing Your Non-Fiction Book - Writing a non-fiction book is a tremendous undertaking, but it is not impossible when you know the steps for writing and structuring your book and understand the categories of non-fiction books that are needed. Includes tape: "Laying a Solid Foundation for Your Book." $34.

10 - The Non-Fiction Book Proposal - A well-planned book proposal actually helps you clarify the theme, purpose, audience, and content of your book. Learn how to write a proposal, chapter outline, and cover letter that will capture an editor's attention. Includes tape: "Green-Light Marketing." $34.
